

Liberal Arts College Public Lecture

Objectivity Under Siege: Further Misadventures of the Politicized Academy?

Thomas Short
Kenyon College

Professor Thomas Short is Associate Professor of Philosophy at Kenyon College in Ohio. He holds degrees from Antioch College and The University of Texas. He is co-author with Stephen Balch of the National Association of Scholars Statement, "Is the Curriculum Biased?". Since 1989, Professor Short has been Vice-President of the NAS. He has written extensively on the crises affecting today's universities. Recent articles of note include: "Making the Campus Safe for Bureaucracy," in Academic Questions, Fall, 1990; "Diversity and 'Breaking the Disciplines': Two New Assaults on the Curriculum," Academic Questions, Summer, 1988; and "A 'New Racism' On Campus?" Commentary, August, 1988. Professor Short is presently working on a book titled, Subversion of the Academy.

Date: Thursday, 7 February
Time: 8:30 p.m.
Place: H-110, Hall Building
1455 de Maisonnewe Blvd. W.
Sir George Williams Campus
Telephone: 848-2565;
FREE ADMISSION

Concordia
UNIVERSITY